

SAFETY MINUTE

Per NEHC-TM OM 6260*

- Workers with potential exposure to hazards are usually placed in medical surveillance programs based on Industrial Hygiene (IH) and/or safety surveys that quantify exposures in the workplace.
- The decision to include a worker in a program is normally based on the possibility of exposure at or above the action level set by U.S. Navy standards that must comply with OSHA standards.
- Workers whose jobs are associated with exposures to hazards at or above the medical surveillance action level for more than 30 days per year or 15 days per quarter are placed into medical surveillance programs.
